Sloth wanted to snooze.

She crawled into the bushes.
The bugs were too noisy.

She swung over the pond.
The frogs were too noisy.

She climbed into the vines.
The monkeys were too noisy.

She swung onto the ground.
The lizards were too noisy.

She crawled near the camp.
The humans were too noisy.

She climbed onto the rocks.
The big cats were too noisy.

She climbed into a tree.
The birds were too noisy.

“The rainforest is too noisy.
I can’t sleep,” she told the bat.
“You’re so tired, you forgot.
Sloths can sleep anywhere,” said the bat.

Sloth smiled.
She closed her eyes and snoozed at last.
